The Committee made a number of recommendations with regard to the work of the Trade, Investment and Innovation Division with respect to channelling trade and investment into sustainable development that are contained in section I of the present report.

The Commission may wish to review the present report, endorse the proposed recommendations and provide the secretariat with guidance regarding its future work.

A. Matters calling for action

1. The following recommendations and requests of the Committee on Trade and Investment are brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) for its consideration and possible action:

   (a) The Committee calls on the secretariat to continue providing technical assistance to countries with special needs (least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States) in the area of trade and trade facilitation;

   (b) The Committee requests the secretariat to continue providing assistance upon the request of individual countries, taking advantage of the in-house expertise of the secretariat, in promoting foreign direct investment (FDI) for sustainable development, developing capacity in negotiating free trade agreements and developing special economic zones;
(c) The Committee emphasizes that the secretariat undertake its work in trade and investment in coordination with other relevant multilateral and regional agencies;

(d) The Committee recommends that the secretariat deepen and strengthen its engagement of the business sector in efforts to achieve the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, and recognizes the ESCAP Sustainable Business Network and the Asia-Pacific Business Forum as established mechanisms for that purpose.

B. Matters brought to the attention of the Commission

2. The Committee generally supports the findings and recommendations contained in *Asia-Pacific Trade and Investment Report 2017: Channelling Trade and Investment into Sustainable Development*1 and the pre-session documents.

II. Proceedings

A. Asia-Pacific Trade and Investment Report 2017

(Agenda item 4)

Review of recent trends and developments

(Agenda item 4 (a))

Channelling trade and investment into sustainable development

(Agenda item 4 (b))

4. The Committee benefited from a panel discussion on the theme topic of the Report, “Channelling trade and investment into sustainable development”. The panel comprised Mr. Arjuna Sujeeva Senasinghe, State Minister of International Trade, Ministry of Development Strategies and International Trade, Sri Lanka; Mr. Swarnim Wagle, Vice-Chairman, National Planning Commission, Nepal; Mr. Pedro Eloy, Director and Senior Vice-President, Digital and Information Technology, Fung Holdings, and Chair, Young Entrepreneurs Task Force, ESCAP Sustainable Business Network; Mr. Paul Baker, Chief Executive and founder, International Economics Consulting Limited, and adviser to the Asia-Pacific Research and Training Network on Trade. The panel discussion was moderated by the Executive Secretary.

5. The main observations and conclusions resulting from the panel discussion are given in the following paragraphs:

(a) Inclusive participation, political stability, policy and regulatory transparency, rule of law, zero tolerance for corruption, the reduction of carbon emissions and the promotion of renewable energy were important prerequisites for channelling trade and investment into sustainable development;

(b) The promotion of regional connectivity, in particular in transport and energy, and the forging of a proper balance between multilateral, regional and bilateral trade agreements provided essential foundations for countries to promote their international trade;

1 United Nations publication, Sales No. E.17.II.F.22.
(c) Trade and investment, which were mutually reinforcing, needed to be strengthened in tandem, including through the proper sequencing of relevant policies;

(d) Landlocked developing countries faced particular challenges to effectively participate in international trade, such as lack of effective access to ports, large distance from markets and often a lack of proper infrastructure in neighbouring transit countries. For that purpose, they needed to reduce trade costs and take other trade facilitation measures, invest in physical and digital infrastructure, and deregulate services related to the digital economy. In addition, they needed to effectively participate in regional cooperation mechanisms;

(e) The promotion of the effective participation of small and medium-sized enterprises in international trade and global value chains could help foster inclusive trade through enhanced engagement of women and young entrepreneurs. For that purpose, countries could reduce trade distortions such as non-tariff measures, improve the enabling environment for small and medium-sized enterprises, improve market access for small and medium-sized enterprises, facilitate their access to finance and credit such as matching funds and fintech, develop industrial and special economic zones and raise their supply-side capacity;

(f) In particular, fintech and e-commerce were catalysing trade and investment, provided opportunities for start-ups and helped small and medium-sized enterprises to link with global markets. Governments must support fintech and e-commerce by adopting appropriate supporting regulations and improve cybersecurity;

(g) Youth were both drivers and learners of new technologies and innovation. They were enablers of big data and fintech solutions such as e-payments. It was usually youth who managed start-ups and small and medium-sized enterprises, and they had a good understanding of the digital economy, therefore providing strong support for big business;

(h) In that regard, there was a need for an inclusive framework for young entrepreneurs, and Governments should actively support them, in particular women entrepreneurs, who were often neglected. On a basic level, such support included promoting gender balance and reducing gender bias in society and the economy at large, then ensuring an enabling business environment for women entrepreneurs and raising their capacity through appropriate training;

(i) Better sustainability indicators must be developed and more precise definitions of sustainability concepts adopted in order to properly measure and monitor the impact of trade and investment and related agreements on inclusive and sustainable development. It was often a challenge to collect the relevant data for such indicators.

6. Representatives of the following members and associate members made statements: China; India; and Russian Federation. The statements were combined with those made under agenda item 5, and are summarized under that item.

B. Reviewing the role of trade and trade policy as drivers of regional integration and prosperity in an era of economic uncertainty
(Agenda item 5)

7. The Committee had before it the note by the secretariat on reviewing the role of trade and trade policy as drivers of regional integration and prosperity in an era of economic uncertainty (E/ESCAP/CTI(5)/2 and E/ESCAP/CTI(5)/2/Corr.1).
8. Representatives of the following members and associate members made statements: China; India; Japan; Russian Federation; and Sri Lanka. The representative of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) also made a statement.

9. The Committee recognized that trade and investment were engines of growth and important means of implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals. In that regard, the Committee emphasized the importance of an open and fair trading environment in Asia and the Pacific and that trade protectionism should be avoided in all its forms. In particular, one country representative noted that unilateral politically motivated trade and investment restrictions should be avoided.

10. One country representative reaffirmed the importance of Sustainable Development Goal 17 (Strengthen the means of implementation and revitalize the Global Partnership for Sustainable Development), in particular the promotion of an equitable trading system and level playing field to ensure that developing countries were better integrated into the global trading system, including by increasing the share of global exports from least developed countries and providing those countries with duty-free and quota-free access to developed-country markets.

11. One country representative expressed the view that regional connectivity initiatives must be based on universally recognized international norms, good governance, rule of law, openness, transparency and quality. The representative further stated that connectivity projects were best pursued in a manner that respected sovereignty and territorial integrity.

12. The Committee noted that relations between Governments and the private sector should be strengthened and that trade restrictions and transport bottlenecks for private sector trade and investment should be reduced.

13. One country representative observed that a focus on environmental goods and services should not result in discrimination against trade in other goods.

14. The Committee noted that strengthening subregional and regional cooperation was important for trade and investment. One country representative pointed out the benefits of the Belt and Road Initiative for regional cooperation and integration that would also promote trade and investment, and informed the Committee of the various events organized by China for that purpose, including hosting the China International Imports Expo in 2018.

15. One country representative noted the importance of UNCITRAL in harmonizing trade laws and regulations of his country. Another country representative recommended that UNCITRAL should continue to play a role in strengthening and harmonizing trade laws and regulations, including in the context of the Framework Agreement on Facilitation of Cross-border Paperless Trade in Asia and the Pacific.

C. Promoting trade facilitation, paperless trade and electronic commerce for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals
(Agenda item 6)

16. The Committee had before it the note by the secretariat on promoting trade facilitation, paperless trade and electronic commerce for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (E/ESCAP/CTI(5)/3).
17. Representatives of the following members and associate members made statements: Bhutan; China; Iran (Islamic Republic of); Mongolia; Pakistan; and Viet Nam.

18. The representative of UNCITRAL also made a statement.

19. One country representative noted the challenges encountered in trade policymaking, including the diversification of the economy away from dependence on natural resources because of uncertainties in international trade deriving from such phenomena as rising protectionism; the high growth rate of emerging technologies and social media; the need for mainstreaming of sustainability into trade policy and business strategies; the expansion of standards to include social and environmental standards; reduced margins of tariff preferences under preferential trade agreements; the rapid growth of start-ups; the promotion of inclusive trade, including participation of women and young people; and the need for innovation in trade promotion. The representative called on ESCAP to organize a forum, possibly in Tehran, to discuss challenges of ensuring policy coherence.

20. Some country representatives called on member States to accede to and ratify the Framework Agreement on Facilitation of Cross-border Paperless Trade in Asia and the Pacific.

21. Some country representatives noted the signing of the Framework Agreement by some ESCAP member States, and that, while the representatives supported the promotion of paperless trade and e-commerce, its implementation should be supported by extrabudgetary means.

22. The Committee noted the importance of trade and trade facilitation for developing countries and, in that context, was informed of the policies and efforts of Bhutan, China, Mongolia and Pakistan.

23. One country representative commended the secretariat for its study on paperless trade and electronic commerce in Mongolia and the organization of a joint consultation on the subject. The representative also expressed his appreciation to the secretariat for the support received by his country on capacity-building for the negotiation of free trade agreements and looked forward to continuing to receive assistance in that area. In addition, the representative also requested assistance in the implementation of the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade Facilitation and capacity-building in developing special economic zones and technology and innovation for small and medium-sized enterprises.

D. Investment and enterprise development for sustainable development (Agenda item 7)

24. The Committee had before it the Handbook on Policies, Promotion and Facilitation of Foreign Direct Investment for Sustainable Development in Asia and the Pacific and the note by the secretariat on investment and enterprise development for sustainable development (E/ESCAP/CTI(5)/4).

25. Following an introduction by the secretariat, a panel discussion was held on promoting and facilitating FDI for sustainable development. The panel was moderated by the Chief of the Investment and Enterprise Development Section of the Trade, Investment and Innovation Division of ESCAP.

2 ST/ESCAP/2786.
26. The panel comprised Ms. Bussarakum Sriratana, Executive Director, International Affairs Division, Office of the Board of Investment, Thailand; Mr. Nuradil Baiasov, Head, Investment Projects Promotion Division, State Agency for Investment and Export Promotion, Ministry of Economy, Kyrgyzstan; and Mr. Julien Chaisse, Professor and Director, Centre for Financial Regulation and Economic Development, Faculty of Law, Chinese University of Hong Kong.

27. Representatives of the following members and associate members made statements in conjunction with the panel: Bangladesh; China; Iran (Islamic Republic of); Kyrgyzstan; Mongolia; and Papua New Guinea.

28. The main observations and conclusions resulting from the panel discussion were as follows:

(a) FDI had generally played an important role in triggering economic growth in many developing countries. FDI should benefit not only investors but also the host country economy and people and contribute to the Sustainable Development Goals;

(b) The establishment of advanced infrastructure, including airports, ports, roads and railroads, was important for attracting FDI in specific locations. However, equally important were the development of cities, education and the provision of skilled labour;

(c) Special economic zones could play an important role in providing advanced infrastructure for investors and in forging economic linkages with neighbouring countries but should be sustainable and provide essential social services to communities living in those zones;

(d) In that context, establishing an enabling environment for business and investment was essential for attracting investment, including reducing business regulations and using attractive tax rates, while strengthening the social and environmental responsibility of investors;

(e) Membership in the World Trade Organization, participation in regional cooperation initiatives and the development of transit infrastructure were important for landlocked developing countries that wanted to attract FDI;

(f) International investment agreements had evolved from focusing on investment protection towards covering investment liberalization and an increasing emphasis on sustainability, including a review of investor-state dispute settlement mechanisms and procedures, and investment facilitation;

(g) In that regard, investment facilitation had emerged as an essential component of general investment promotion, including the establishment of ombudsman services and other mechanisms to deal with investor issues and concerns which helped to reduce investor-state disputes;

(h) Investment facilitation also included promoting government-investor dialogues and improving dialogues and coordination among government entities and ministries at the national and regional levels;

(i) Identifying the proper model and type of foreign investment was also important for specific industries and meeting development objectives. In that regard, there was a need to target specific investors in identified priority areas;

(j) Public-private partnership contracts, including those involving foreign investors, needed to be improved both in terms of coverage and design, including provisions for dispute settlement;
(k) ESCAP could promote the sharing of best practices in promoting FDI for sustainable development with a view to promoting convergence among countries. ESCAP should also strengthen cooperation with UNCITRAL and other agencies in the area of investment. ESCAP could also develop model investment treaties and agreements or provide options.

29. One country representative noted that the evaluation of intangible assets of foreign investment was a challenge for many countries in promoting sustainability and requested the secretariat to organize workshops on that issue.

30. One country representative observed that countries should increasingly adopt self-financing mechanisms by formulating proper fiscal policies and establishing public-private partnerships and regional banks, such as the New Development Bank established by Brazil, China, India, the Russian Federation and South Africa.

E. Consideration of the future focus of the trade and investment subprogramme
(Agenda item 8)

Proposed strategic framework for the period 2020–2021
(Agenda item 8 (a))

31. The Director of the Trade, Investment and Innovation Division introduced the future work of the secretariat in trade and investment. She further stated that the Division was undergoing restructuring in order to enable it to support the following workstreams in an integrated manner: trade policy formulation and impacts; trade facilitation and paperless trade; promotion and facilitation of FDI; deep regional cooperation and integration agreements; enterprise development, including promoting women’s and youth entrepreneurship and linking small and medium-sized enterprises with the global and regional economy; impact investment and responsible business promotion; technology dissemination facilitation; social innovation and inclusive technology policy; and digitalization of trade, including, in particular regulatory and impact assessment of e-commerce and other dimensions of digital trade. The Division was working to enhance the linkages of those workstreams with sustainable development.

32. A Programme Officer of the Strategy and Programme Management Division made a presentation on the preparations for the strategic framework for the period 2020–2021, which depended on the adoption by States Members of the United Nations of the reform proposals of the Secretary-General on the preparations of such frameworks.
