Background
The Asia-Pacific Sustainable Development Journal is published twice a year as a policy-oriented journal to stimulate and enrich research in the formulation of policy in the Asia-Pacific region towards the fulfilment of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. The Journal has focused its scope and objectives on delivering the commitment of ESCAP to the Countries in Special Situations, comprising the least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States, to capacity development and to the promotion of policy dialogues.

The latest issue (Vol. 31, No. 1, May 2024) of the Asia-Pacific Sustainable Development Journal, has a specific theme, “Special theme: Sustainable development challenges in the Pacific small island developing States: The role of regional cooperation”, which takes stock of the achievements of Pacific small island developing States and the challenges ahead to inform the next 10-year action agenda.

The Journal articles focus on countries in special situations, such as Pacific small island developing States, and their engagement to promote regional cooperation for sustainable development. The papers in this issue discuss a wide range of challenges confronting the Pacific small island developing States and the policy implications of these challenges, providing a bridge between academic researchers and policymakers, which is one of the key objectives of the Asia-Pacific Sustainable Development Journal.

In the upcoming Fourth International Conference on Small Island Developing States (SIDS4), 27-30 May 2024 in Antigua and Barbuda, there are opportunities for the Pacific SIDS to underscore the importance of promoting regional cooperation to build resilient economies and sustainable development. Furthermore, this 80th session of the Commission is an important platform to reflect on the regional cooperation and its implications for the socio-economic prosperity and climate action in the Asia-Pacific SIDS.

This side event will feature key issues, findings and recommendations from select analytical papers of the current issue of the Journal which will serve as a basis to provoke further discussion, policy dialogue and knowledge exchange among policymakers, academics, researchers and development practitioners on sustainable development issues in the region.
