Asia-Pacific Ministerial Conference on the Beijing+25 Review

Bangkok, 27–29 November 2019

Asia-Pacific Declaration on Advancing Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment: Beijing+25 Review*Preamble

1. We, the Ministers and representatives of members and associate members of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, gathered at the Asia-Pacific Ministerial Conference on the Beijing+25 Review, held in Bangkok from 27 to 29 November 2019, committed to accelerate efforts to achieve gender equality and women’s empowerment, ensuring women’s human rights for an equal future in Asia and the Pacific,
2. Reaffirming the 1995 Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action¹ and its report and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development,² as well as the commitments to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls and ensuring women’s human rights, made at relevant intergovernmental and United Nations summits and conferences and at the regional and global follow-up to those summits and conferences, which have laid a solid foundation for mutually reinforcing linkages between gender equality and sustainable development,
3. Reiterating that the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,³ the Convention on the Rights of the Child⁴ and the Optional Protocols thereto,⁵ as well as other relevant conventions and treaties, such as the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural

* Reissued for technical reasons on 7 February 2020.

Rights,⁶ the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights⁷ and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities,⁸ provide an international legal framework and a comprehensive set of measures for realizing gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls and the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by all women and girls of all ages,

4. Reaffirming further the importance of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,⁹ the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women,¹⁰ the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action¹¹ and the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development,¹² as well as other international instruments relating to human rights, which are deemed to be universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, and of the equal rights of men and women in their diversity, and emphasizing the responsibilities of all States to protect and promote human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction of any kind as to race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth, disability or other status,

5. Recalling Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820 (2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888 (2009) of 30 September 2009, 1889 (2009) of 5 October 2009 and 1960 (2010) of 16 December 2010 on women, peace and security and all relevant Security Council resolutions on children and armed conflict, including resolutions 1882 (2009) of 4 August 2009 and 1998 (2011) of 12 July 2011 on armed conflict and post-conflict situations,

6. Affirming further the synergies between the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development,

7. Recognizing that women play a vital role as agents of development, that the achievement of full human potential and of sustainable development is not possible if one half of humanity continues to be denied its full human rights and opportunities, and that the Sustainable Development Goals should be achieved for all nations and peoples and across all segments of society,

8. Acknowledging the advances made towards gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls in Asia and the Pacific by Governments, particularly in the development, adoption and implementation of laws, regulations and policy frameworks,

9. Welcoming the major contribution made by civil society, including women's and community-based organizations, feminist groups, women human rights defenders, girls' and youth-led organizations, and trade unions in placing the interest, needs and visions of women and girls, including those living in rural areas, on local, national, regional and international agendas, including the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. It also recognizes the importance of having an open, inclusive and transparent engagement with civil society in the implementation of measures to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls,

10. Noting megatrends in Asia and the Pacific, including the rising inequalities within and between countries, the unprecedented pace of population ageing, the youth bulge, unplanned and rapid urbanization, the scale and multidimensional nature of migration, the high rates of informal and non-standard forms of employment, technological advancement, the high rates of unemployment among the young population, climate change, the intensity and frequency of extreme weather events, disasters and environmental degradation, and the increasing acts of violence and extremism, all of which have a differentiated and disproportionate impact on women and girls,

11. Expressing concern that progress has not been consistent across the region, that multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination as well as exploitation, marginalization, oppression and subordination of women and girls still persist, placing them at greater risk, and calling on the Asia-Pacific region to take appropriate action to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals and to protect and empower women and girls to achieve the full enjoyment of their human rights without discrimination,

12. Stressing the urgent need to address intersectional barriers and the underlying gender inequalities prevailing in many countries as well as gender-based violence and discrimination against all women and girls, including unequal access to and control of resources, opportunities, information and services, which undermine inclusive and sustainable development in the region, including in particular continuing low levels of women's labour force participation, a disproportionate number of women working in the informal economy and shouldering an unequal share of unpaid care work, the prevalence of gender-based violence and harmful practices, poor access to quality health-care services, and low levels of representation and participation in decision-making,

A call to action

13. Call upon Governments in Asia and the Pacific, with the support of all relevant stakeholders, as appropriate, to intensify actions to realize women's equal enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms for an equal future by 2030 through the following actions, broadly clustered under the overarching dimensions of equitable and inclusive development, sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights, in accordance with the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Beijing Platform for Action, shared prosperity and decent work; poverty eradication, social protection and social and public services; freedom from violence, stigma, harmful stereotypes and negative social norms; participation; social dialogue, accountability and gender-responsive institutions; peaceful and inclusive societies; environmental conservation, climate action and resilience-building; data and statistics; and partnerships and regional cooperation and coordination;

Equitable and inclusive development, shared prosperity and decent work

14. Ensuring women's economic empowerment and the full integration of women into the formal economy, and extending social and legal protection to women workers in the informal and non-formal economy by, inter alia:

(a) Ensuring that all people, in particular women and girls living in poverty and in vulnerable situations, benefit from inclusive economic growth and development, in alignment with the Addis Ababa Action Agenda of the Third International Conference on Financing for Development¹³ and in line with the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development;

(b) Taking appropriate measures and removing obstacles to ensure that all women throughout their life cycle have equal opportunities for education, decent work and favourable conditions of work, including wages that provide for an adequate standard of living and equal pay for work of equal value, an enabling work environment, including for rural women, as well as equal opportunities to diversify their educational and occupational choices and career progression into emerging fields and growing economic sectors, such as science, technology, engineering and mathematics, and information and communications technology, as well as clean energy;

(c) Enacting and enforcing laws and regulatory frameworks and enabling environments and policies that ensure substantive equality by upholding the principle of equal pay for equal work or work of equal value, prohibiting discrimination against women, in particular in the world of work, including labour exploitation, and violence against women in all its forms, including protecting all workers regardless of work status and location, and ensuring equal access to justice and legal assistance;

(d) Acknowledging the contributions to gender equality and encouraging Governments to sign and ratify relevant international conventions aiming at the elimination of violence against and harassment of women and girls in the world of work;

(e) Taking measures to facilitate the financial inclusion and financial literacy of women and their equal access to formal financial services, in particular for women entrepreneurs, to start, run and expand their businesses throughout the supply chain, including by adopting or reviewing financial inclusion strategies, policies and laws, encouraging commercial banking systems and remittance service providers to better serve women, encouraging more private investment in women-owned and women-led businesses, and encouraging the use of innovative tools and platforms, while ensuring that attention is also paid to addressing the unintended consequences of some of the financial services, for example microcredit schemes that can result in a double burden for women, and of gender-responsive macroeconomic policies;

(f) Promoting a socially responsible and accountable private sector that engages as a reliable and consistent partner in the development process and takes into account not only the economic and financial but also the development, social, human rights, gender and environmental implications of their undertakings, including by respecting principles and frameworks such as the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Implementing the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework¹⁴ and the International Labour Organization Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, as well as labour, environmental and health standards;

(g) Recognizing the contribution of migrants, in particular women migrant workers, to global economic growth and sustainable development, by adopting and implementing national gender-responsive migration policies and legislation, facilitating, where feasible, the safe integration of women migrant workers into the labour market and their access to social protection, and supporting the sustainable, safe reintegration of returning migrant women and girls into their local communities;

¹³ General Assembly resolution 69/313, annex.

¹⁴ A/HRC/17/31, annex.

(h) Recognizing the important role and contribution of women in rural and remote areas, including indigenous women, as critical agents in the eradication of poverty and in enhancing sustainable agricultural and rural development, as well as sustainable fisheries;

(i) Strengthening policies that support diverse economic activities, including smallholder agriculture and livestock and fisheries production, and that ensure improved productive capacities and incomes, with recognition for innovative work approaches in the various sectors, as well as policies that support food security and strengthened resilience, risk management, and the role and the meaningful participation of women in such activities, without distinction of any kind, including by addressing the multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination and barriers women face, and supporting, inter alia, equal access to, management of and ownership over land resources, marine, and agricultural and fisheries technologies, as well as women's innovation and women-led start-ups;

(j) Taking appropriate measures to prevent the informalization of formal economy jobs, to address unjust, unsafe and unhealthy working conditions, and to respond to the trafficking of all women and girls for domestic labour purposes, which significantly affect all women and girls, through, inter alia, the development of a harmonized definition of the informal economy and the promotion of occupational safety and health protection for workers in the informal economy;

(k) Scaling up efforts to accelerate the transition of women from informal employment to formal employment, including access to decent work, education and training, improved wages, social protection and quality childcare;

(l) Recognizing the need to accelerate efforts to reduce and redistribute the disproportionate share of unpaid care and domestic work shouldered by women of all ages and ensure the representation of caregivers in decision-making on policies that reflect their needs and interests, and further recognizing that failure to do so will inevitably place women engaged in informal domestic work, including migrant workers, in precarious environments;

(m) Promoting the transition to formal employment for women employed in informal paid work, including home-based and own-account work, seasonal contracts and part-time work, work in micro-, small and medium-sized enterprises, and work in the agriculture and fisheries sectors, among others;

15. Increasing access to productive resources that enhance women's self-reliance and incomes and the creation of short- and long-term wage employment for women:

(a) Encouraging the gender-responsive recruitment of women and their timely promotion, especially at senior levels, and the elimination of discriminatory attitudes among management, which enhance women's participation;

(b) Taking all appropriate measures to ensure support for the participation of women with disabilities in the informal and formal economies, with access to financial services, tools and other specifically tailored platforms;

(c) Refraining from promulgating and applying any unilateral economic, financial or trade measure not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations that impedes the full achievement of economic and social development, particularly in developing countries;

Poverty eradication, social protection and social and public services

16. Recognizing women as key contributors and vital agents in combating poverty and inequalities, and ensuring gender-responsive and inclusive social protection systems, public services and infrastructure by, inter alia:

(a) Establishing and strengthening inclusive, gender-responsive and age-appropriate social protection systems and institutions and social protection floors as well as access to public services that are well coordinated and adequately resourced to ensure full access to social protection and income security for all women and girls of all ages, without discrimination or any kind of social stigma, and taking measures to progressively achieve higher levels of protection towards universal coverage;

(b) Noting the vital importance of birth registration for the realization of all human rights, particularly given the low levels of birth registration among some indigenous women and girls, women and girls with disabilities, migrant women and girls, and women and girls in rural areas, and expressing further concern that all persons without birth registration may be more vulnerable to marginalization, exclusion, discrimination, violence, statelessness, exploitation and abuse, as well as of guaranteeing universal registration of births and ensuring timely registration of marriages, including by removing physical, administrative, procedural and other barriers that impede access to registration and by providing, where lacking, mechanisms for the registration of births and marriages, including customary and religious marriages;

(c) Identifying and removing barriers that constrain women's and girls' access to public services, such as geographic and institutional barriers, which face women in rural and remote areas and indigenous women in particular, in order to guarantee their access to these services on a regular basis and during emergencies;

(d) Promoting the design and implementation of gender-responsive and participatory social protection, public service and infrastructure programmes through transparent assessments of gendered risks and analyses of women's and girls' exclusion from existing social protection schemes, as well as through gender-responsive planning and budgeting and by strengthening monitoring, evaluation and accountability mechanisms;

(e) Ensuring that public services are safe and that supportive environments are available, accessible, affordable, gender responsive, culturally appropriate and of sustained good quality for all women and girls;

(f) Prioritizing investments that contribute to the equal sharing of responsibilities between women and men, including through accessible and affordable childcare and other support services;

(g) Integrating a gender perspective into the planning and use of public spaces, the design and development of smart cities, communities and rural areas and intelligent mobility planning processes, promoting the mobility and empowerment of women and girls, and ensuring that urban, rural and peripheral public transport, including land and water transport systems and infrastructure, are sustainable, accessible, safe, affordable and gender responsive;

17. Accelerating progress towards the goal of universal health coverage that comprises universal and equitable access to gender-responsive quality health-care services and quality, essential, affordable and effective medicines for all:

(a) Accelerating progress towards achieving the goal of universal health coverage for all women and girls of all ages, while ensuring that the use of such services and medicines does not expose the users to financial hardship, including through the provision of social protection;

(b) Strengthening efforts to achieve universal access to HIV and AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support and provide HIV-sensitive social protection measures, including cash transfers and other multisectoral programmes, as appropriate, to ensure access to health care, education, housing and employment for all women and girls living with, at risk of, or affected by HIV and AIDS, including co-infections and other sexually transmitted infections, and promoting the active and meaningful participation, contribution and leadership of women of all ages living with HIV in the context of HIV and AIDS responses;

(c) Ensuring universal access to sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights in accordance with the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of their review conferences;

(d) Recognizing that women's rights include their right to have control over and decide freely and responsibly on matters related to their sexuality, including sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights in accordance with the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Beijing Platform for Action and the review outcomes, free of coercion, discrimination and violence, as a contribution to the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women;

(e) Ensuring the survival, protection, development and advancement of the girl child by enacting and enforcing laws and policies aimed at preventing and ending violence against women in all its forms and harmful practices such as child, early and forced marriage and female genital mutilation, and by providing support for married girls, pregnant girls, adolescent mothers and girls in informal unions, to ensure the survival, protection, development and advancement of the girl child;

(f) Addressing mental health issues as an essential step required for women and children who are victims of violence;

(g) Emphasizing the use of media, including national and local media, mainstream broadcast and print media, and electronic digital media, to raise awareness and inform women, and girls appropriately supported by their families and legal guardians, about available health-care services, preventive health information, and sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights, in accordance with the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Beijing Platform for Action;

18. Promoting and respecting the right of women and girls of all ages to education at all levels, especially for those who have been left furthest behind, by, inter alia:

(a) Ensuring the right of all women and girls to education, removing disparities at all levels by eliminating discriminatory laws and practices, providing universal access to accessible, inclusive, equal and non-discriminatory quality education, including free, equitable and quality primary and secondary education and affordable lifelong learning, and investing in quality public education systems and infrastructure, as consistent with national laws;

(b) Reaffirming that equal access to quality and inclusive education and training at all levels, in particular in business, trade, administration, management, information and communications technology, science, new and existing technologies, engineering, and arts and mathematics, and the elimination of gender inequalities at all levels, are essential for gender equality, the empowerment of women and poverty eradication and for allowing women's full and equal contribution to, and equal opportunity to benefit from, development;

(c) Addressing changing negative social norms and gender stereotypes in education systems, including in curricula, teaching methodologies and resources, and other instructional materials, that devalue girls' education and prevent women and girls from having equal access to education and employment opportunities, and taking all appropriate measures to eliminate all types of violence in educational institutions;

(d) Facilitating the effective transition from education or unemployment to work, including through skills development and lifelong learning opportunities, to enable the active participation of women and girls, particularly rural women and girls, migrant women and girls, women and girls with disabilities and indigenous women, in development, and women's active participation in governance and decision-making at all levels;

(e) Eliminating occupational segregation by addressing structural barriers, gender stereotypes and negative social norms, promoting women's equal access to and participation in labour markets, education and training, supporting women to diversify their educational and occupational choices in emerging fields and growing economic sectors, such as science, technology, engineering and mathematics, and information and communications technology, and recognizing the value of sectors that have large numbers of women workers;

Freedom from violence, stigma, harmful stereotypes and negative social norms

19. Strongly condemning all forms of violence against all women and girls, which is rooted in historical and structural inequality and unequal power relations between men and women, re-emphasizing that sexual and gender-based violence against women and girls, in public and private spheres, is a major impediment to the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls and that it violates and impairs or nullifies their full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and intensifying efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence and discrimination against all women and girls by, inter alia:

(a) Reviewing, amending, enacting and enforcing legislation in reference to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other relevant regional and international human rights obligations and treaties, also taking into consideration laws outside the criminal justice sector, including family-oriented policies to prevent and eliminate all forms of discrimination, violence against women and girls and other harmful practices, including women's unequal status in marriage, child, early and forced marriage, female genital mutilation, female infanticide, sexual harassment and victim-blaming in both the public and private spaces, including in the digital context, by strengthening the capacity of legal systems and institutions to translate legislation into implementation that ensures women's and girls' access to justice and effective remedy;

(b) Adopting, implementing, monitoring and evaluating relevant policies that prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls in the public and private spheres, including in digital contexts, and that ensure access to justice, including by ensuring gender-responsive police investigation services that enable completed prosecutions, providing high-quality protection and support services for victims, survivors and witnesses, strengthening data collection and evidence on violence against women and girls, improving rates of reporting, addressing the high attrition rate from reporting to conviction, reinforcing, where appropriate, criminal laws and procedures relating to all forms of violence against women and girls, and countering the attitudes of gender inequality that perpetuate violence against women, with a focus on prevention, protection, rescue, rehabilitation and effective redress, including access, without stigma, to social and care services for victims and survivors and culturally appropriate interventions developed in consultation with local communities;

(c) Devising, strengthening and implementing, as appropriate, comprehensive anti-trafficking legal and regulatory frameworks and strategies in a gender-responsive and age-, culture- and disability-sensitive manner, to combat and eliminate all forms of domestic and cross-border trafficking in persons, as well as to provide access, as applicable, protection, rehabilitation, repatriation and reintegration assistance to victims of trafficking in persons, recognizing the need to protect the confidentiality and the personal data of victims, and enhancing international cooperation, voluntary information-sharing, and legislative and other measures to counter all forms of exploitation of persons, especially women and girls, including online and offline sexual exploitation and forced labour;

(d) Establishing, strengthening and promoting comprehensive, coordinated, interdisciplinary, linguistically and culturally accessible and sustained multisectoral services, programmes and responses for all victims of all forms of violence and other forms of abuse, especially migrant women and girls and children, who are even more vulnerable, that are adequately resourced and that include effective and coordinated action by, as appropriate, relevant stakeholders, such as the police and the justice sector, as well as providers of legal aid services, health-care services, shelters, medical and psychological assistance, counselling services and protection, and improving referral systems, as well as, in the case of girl victims, ensuring that such services, programmes and responses take into account the best interests of the child;

(e) Strengthening and allocating resources to national machineries for the promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women;

20. Transforming negative gender norms, discriminatory social attitudes, and adverse social and cultural patterns of conduct, and eliminating structurally unequal power relations that persist between women and men, in order to realize gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls across all areas by, inter alia:

(a) Designing, implementing, monitoring and evaluating appropriate legislation, reforms and domestic policies that aim to transform negative gender norms, stereotypes and discriminatory social attitudes in order to prevent and eliminate, in all public, private and digital spaces and spheres of human interaction, unequal power relations at the individual, structural and systemic levels whereby women and girls are regarded as subordinate to men and boys, especially with regard to the use of media to perpetuate violence against women and girls, namely pornography and child sex abuse materials;

(b) Collaborating with all relevant stakeholders, including civil society organizations, and engaging men and boys and women and girls, to promote non-discriminatory, culturally appropriate and gender-sensitive portrayals of women and men by challenging and eliminating stereotypes and violence against women and girls, including in digital contexts, and by developing and implementing measures, including regulatory frameworks and monitoring mechanisms, to promote the empowerment of women;

(c) Closing the digital gender gap by enhancing women's participation as users, content creators, employees, entrepreneurs, innovators and leaders through, inter alia, gender-responsive digital governance frameworks, and by increasing access of all women and girls to digital technologies;

Participation, social dialogue, accountability and national women's machinery for gender equality and women's empowerment

21. Ensuring national gender-responsive institutions as well as participation, accountability and social dialogue by, inter alia:

(a) Ensuring the increased inclusive and effective participation of national gender machinery for gender equality and women's empowerment in the formulation and monitoring of inclusive national development strategies that recognize the specific needs of diverse groups of women, including by strengthening the leadership, mandates, status, and human and financial capacities of coordination mechanisms;

(b) Incorporating a gender perspective into the design, resource allocation, implementation, monitoring, evaluation and reporting of programmes, especially national programmes and projects through all national laws, policies and regulations;

(c) Encouraging a gender-responsive approach to public financial management, including planning, budgeting, and auditing and monitoring across all sectors of public expenditure, for gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls;

(d) Taking measures to remove barriers and provide all women with economic empowerment opportunities to achieve full, equal, substantive and effective participation and access to leadership and senior-level positions at all levels and in all spheres;

(e) Recognizing the important role of civil society and human rights institutions and the private sector in promoting and protecting the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all women and girls, and further encouraging open, inclusive, transparent and meaningful engagement and dialogue among civil society and private sector actors and governments;

(f) Strengthening the meaningful engagement and support of civil society organizations, and integrating a gender perspective into the creation of a safe and enabling environment that ensures that violations or abuses are prevented or promptly and properly investigated and that those responsible are held accountable;

(g) Promoting gender equality and providing a gender-responsive, free and fair electoral process that is inclusive, participatory and non-discriminatory;

Peaceful and inclusive societies

22. Accelerating the implementation of the women, peace and security agenda by, inter alia:

(a) Noting the significance of the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and the need to further accelerate the implementation of the women, peace and security agenda at the subnational, national, regional and international levels;

(b) Ensuring the protection of the rights of all women and girls from human rights violations and abuses and ensuring women's and girls' expeditious access to healing and development programmes and services and legal remedies, including transitional and restorative justice mechanisms;

(c) Promoting the appropriate and meaningful participation and leadership of women, in cooperation with civil society organizations, in efforts to implement the women, peace and security agenda, including preventing violence and extremism and countering terrorism in areas affected by escalating and protracted armed conflicts and related humanitarian crises;

(d) Ensuring systematic attention to, recognition of and support for the important role of women in conflict prevention and resolution, their empowerment, access to and control over resources, and decision-making related to the implementation of the women, peace and security agenda in rebuilding, peacebuilding, peacekeeping in armed conflict, post-conflict planning, economic recovery and sustaining peace;

(e) Building the capacity and leadership of women as peacebuilders, including as mediators, negotiators and responders, at the regional, national and local levels, as appropriate;

(f) Encouraging States to take measures to address the particular vulnerability and differentiated needs of women and children among displaced persons through prevention, protection and rehabilitation, including when developing and implementing relevant gender-responsive policies, programmes and services, inter alia, health-care services, and social protection, in a manner that takes into consideration areas affected by armed conflict;

Environmental conservation, climate action and resilience-building

23. Integrating and mainstreaming a gender perspective into environmental conservation, protection and rehabilitation, and promoting gender-responsive climate action, disaster risk reduction and resilience-building, taking into account that climate change, particularly the crisis facing Pacific small island developing States and other low-lying countries, has differentiated, considerable impacts on all women and girls, including in countries with nomadic cultures, and that they can be more vulnerable to climate impacts, by, inter alia:

(a) Promoting the active role of women as holders of knowledge and as agents of change in efforts to safeguard the environment and the integration of a gender perspective into policies and programmes related to environmental conservation, protection and rehabilitation, including the conservation and sustainable use of oceans, seas and marine resources for sustainable development, disaster risk reduction, humanitarian responses to natural disasters, resilience-building, environmental and natural resource management and governance, and climate change, with full and equal leadership and participation of women at all levels of policymaking and decision-making, and addressing the challenges for all women and girls posed by climate change, including by facilitating women's access to land, water, clean energy and other natural resources consistent with relevant international agreements;

(b) Enhancing women's and girls' resilience to climate change and their participation in decision-making through education and the sustainable use of natural resources, further integrating gender perspectives into policies and programmes related to environmental conservation, including the sustainable use of oceans and marine resources, and ensuring the leadership and full participation of women and girls in climate change mitigation, adaptation and resilience and in environmental conservation activities in accordance with the Paris Agreement;¹⁵

(c) Adopting and implementing gender-responsive strategies on climate change mitigation and adaptation to support the resilience and adaptive capacities of women and girls to respond to and recover from the adverse impacts of climate change, including through the promotion of equal access to essential infrastructure and climate-smart agricultural technology, clean-energy-appropriate financing and technology, humanitarian assistance, food and nutrition, safe drinking water and sanitation, waste management, health-care services, education and training, adequate housing and decent work, social security, and gender-sensitive forecast and early warning systems, with a special focus on women in remote and rural areas;

(d) Identifying and addressing the specific needs of all women and girls through strategies and mechanisms that promote their equal and full participation and leadership, as well as in the gender-responsive planning, delivery, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of holistic disaster risk reduction and management efforts and humanitarian responses to slow-onset events attributed to climate change disasters at all levels, including natural disasters, in line with the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015–2030;¹⁶

(e) Further examining the synergies between environmental conservation and the protection of human rights, and strengthening the evidence base for and awareness about gender-specific environmental and health hazards, which disproportionately affect women and children, especially women with disabilities, elderly women and girls, with particular attention paid to the protection and preservation of the knowledge and practices of women in indigenous and local communities;

Data and statistics

24. Strengthening gender-responsive national statistical systems and data collection, analysis and use by, inter alia:

(a) Integrating a gender-responsive approach into national follow-up to and review of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, including by strengthening national statistical capacities to design, collect, access and publicly disseminate high-quality, reliable and timely data disaggregated by sex, age, income and other characteristics relevant to national contexts, as well as by promoting blended research methodologies using qualitative and quantitative approaches for an enhanced understanding of gender gaps and leveraging the opportunities offered by innovation and technology to measure progress, in collaboration with all relevant stakeholders;

(b) Continuing to develop and enhance standards, methodologies and indicators at the national and international levels to improve data collection, analysis and report writing with regard to gender statistics, and the use and dissemination thereof, as well as information management and coordination, including through data repositories as well as technical and financial collaboration between countries, and leveraging the opportunities offered by innovation and technology to measure progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action as well as the gender-responsive implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development;

Partnerships and regional cooperation

25. Engaging all relevant stakeholders to promote international and regional cooperation and collaboration by, inter alia:

(a) Inviting member States to enhance North-South, South-South, North-North and triangular cooperation as well as responsible public-private partnerships, while noting that national ownership, leadership and capacity-building to implement commitments are indispensable for the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls;

(b) Urging developed countries to fully implement their respective official development assistance commitments to achieve development goals and targets;

(c) Calling on the international community and all relevant stakeholders to provide financial resources to assist Governments, upon their request, in their efforts to meet the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular Goal 5 on gender equality, as well as other development goals, targets and benchmarks related to gender equality and women's empowerment agreed upon at relevant intergovernmental and United Nations special sessions, meetings, conferences and summits;

26. Request the Executive Secretary of the Commission, in cooperation, as appropriate, with the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) and other relevant United Nations entities, to take the following measures:

(a) To attach significance to the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and of the commitments contained in the present Declaration in the programme of work of the Commission, in line with its mandate to promote and assist the pertinent national institutions in monitoring and implementing the Platform for Action;

(b) To continue to promote regional and subregional dialogue and cooperation among members and associate members of the Commission to support multisectoral policies, strategies and programmes and the sharing of best practices in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of subsequent reviews;

(c) To provide members and associate members of the Commission with support, upon their request, in the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and of the commitments contained in the present Declaration at the regional and national levels, including technical assistance to national women's machinery;

(d) To assist members and associate members of the Commission, upon their request, in mainstreaming, as appropriate, the outcomes of the Asia-Pacific Ministerial Conference on the Beijing+25 Review into the implementation of the regional road map for implementing the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in Asia and the Pacific¹⁷ and other key regional processes for the review of the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for
