

United Nations Conference Centre, Bangkok

1/2

3(cg) Gender Statistics

/ Thailand

Thailand would like to offer its support for the endorsement of the Core Set of Gender Indicators in Asia and the Pacific. Thailand has actively contributed to the preparation of the core set through participation in the preparation and consultations on the draft.

The core set represents an invaluable tool that Thailand can use to bridge government planning and policies to promote gender equality and data producers.

The core set is also useful for focus regional efforts to improve gender statistics.

One example is the measurement and valuation of time women spend in important but often unpaid economic activities, such as domestic and household work. An important source of data on this issue is time use surveys which underlie quite a number of indicators in the core set. Thailand has been conducting time use surveys regularly. We are participating in a regional initiative to strengthen analysis and use of time use statistics in collaboration

a

Gender statistics (Thailand)

United Nations Conference Centre, Bangkok

2/2

with a number of countries in the region and ESCAP

We look forward to using the core set as a guide for strengthening gender-responsive statistics in other domains as well.

As the speech of the vice minister of ICT, The Government of Thailand.

one important tool for the NSO is the first NSS master plan (2011-2015) which was endorsed by the cabinet.

The implementation of the MP requires a close working relationship between the NSO and all the Ministries including Gender Statistics.